"Curiouser and curiouser," thought Alice as she looked around and found everything either upside down or backwards in Wonderland.

From the Walt Disney Productions feature film "Alice in Wonderland," first released in 1951

The reaction of guests to Disneyland may very well be similar to that of Alice's when at first they visit the area known as Fantasyland this summer.

Because, until the summer of 1983, many things in Fantasyland will be topsy-turvy and many familiar landmarks missing as the Magic Kingdom prepares a brand new adventure, a bright-new look and improved attractions to further enhance this land of make-believe. Continuing to entertain guests through the 1982 summer season will be "Mr. Toad," "Alice in Wonderland," the Storybook Land

Canal Boats, and "Casey Jr.," as well as untouched "It's a Small World" and "Motor Boat Cruise."

All architectural exteriors in Fantasyland will be re-styled to create the European atmosphere of a storybook village. Added will be landscaping, animation and improved development of the themed look for which Disney is famous.

Present attractions will be revamped to more closely relate to the Walt Disney films from which they emanated.

The 72 wild and wonderful hand-carved horses of the King Arthur Carousel, a long-time favorite attraction, will cavort in a newly landscaped area which will still be visible from the drawbridge entry of Sleeping Beauty Castle. This relocation will improve spaciousness and access throughout the Fantasyland area.

Pinocchio blinked his eyes and raised his wooden arms. "I can move!" he cried. "I'm a real boy!"

"No," the Blue Fairy said sadly. "You have life, but to become a real boy, you must prove yourself brave, truthful, and unselfish." Whereupon the Blue Fairy dubs Jiminy Cricket the Lord High Keeper of Pinocchio's Conscience.

From the Walt Disney Productions feature film "Pinocchio," first released in 1940.

In vehicles resembling Gepetto's carved wooden toys, Disneyland guests will experience an exciting new "Adventures of Pinocchio." They will live in the world of make-believe like the puppet who became a real boy. An Audio-Animatronic Jiminy Cricket will help them choose between the "easy" and "straight and narrow" paths of life. Afterward, guests can enjoy sidewalk dining with tasty take-out food from the new Pinocchio-themed restaurant.

FANTASYLAND

Facelift

Peter Pan was a boy who had decided never to grow up. He lived in faraway Never-Land, a magic place filled with lots of fun and adventures.

From the Walt Disney Productions feature film "Peter Pan," first released in 1953.

In the new "Peter Pan" attraction, the guests' journey will begin in the Darling children's nursery—a replica of the one in the original film. They'll fly with Peter Pan over the sparkling nighttime lights of London to Never-Land encountering many hazards along the way. There they will witness the dazzling display of swordsmanship between Captain Hook and Pan on a square-rigged pirate ship. And then, Tinker Bell will turn the ship to gold...as the exciting adventure continues.

Mr. Toad, the squire of Toad Hall, is a wealthy and reckless sportsman with a love of excitement that borders on mania. His friends, Water Rat, Moley and MacBadger worry a lot about Mr. Toad's escapades.

From the Walt Disney Productions feature film, "The Adventures of Ichabod and Mr. Toad," released in 1949.

Disneyland guests will join the erratic Mr. Toad in a new and expanded wild ride with additional animated characters and thrills, when the entire Fantasyland reconstruction is completed. Their vehicles will be careening through a village where a hat shop was once located.

In a faraway land, a long time ago, there once lived a king and queen with their daughter—who was beautiful beyond compare. Her name was Snow White.

From the Walt Disney Productions, feature film "Snow White and The Seven Dwarfs," first released in 1937.

Even before they enter the new "Snow White's Adventures," guests will get a clue as to its interior story when they observe the jealous Queen looking down from her tower above. This is in keeping with the new design feature of creating a preview show to entertain guests even as they are queuing at the entrance to the attraction.

Dumbo, the baby circus elephant, discovers that he can use his large ears as wings and fly, and he becomes the sensation of the circus.

From the Walt Disney Productions feature film, "Dumbo," first released in 1941.

When guests fly with Dumbo in the 1983 version of the attraction, they will fly over a lagoon and fountain of sparkling water. Timothy Mouse will remain as before, directing the parade of soaring circus Dumbos.

There was a table set out under a tree in front of the house, and the March Hare and the Hatter were having tea at it; a Dormouse was sitting between them, fast asleep, and the other two were using it as a cushion. "No room! No room!" they cried out when they saw Alice coming.

From "Alice in Wonderland" by Lewis Carroll

Sometime during the early summer of 1984, the swirling teacups of the "Mad Tea Party" will be repositioned near a newly-designed "Alice in Wonderland" attraction. A new Mad Hatter souvenir shop will also be relocated near "Alice," thus adding to the overall theming of the storybook land of Fantasyland. In the new "Alice," there will be an enlarged flower garden setting and thrilling encounters with the animated Queen of Hearts, her friend the White Rabbit, the Dormouse and the Hare.

As Walt Disney prophesied, Disneyland will continue to be improved upon...in a happy place that has the magic touch to make storybook dreams come true. 🍄

Ever drifting down the stream—Lingering in the golden gleam—Life, what is it but a dream?

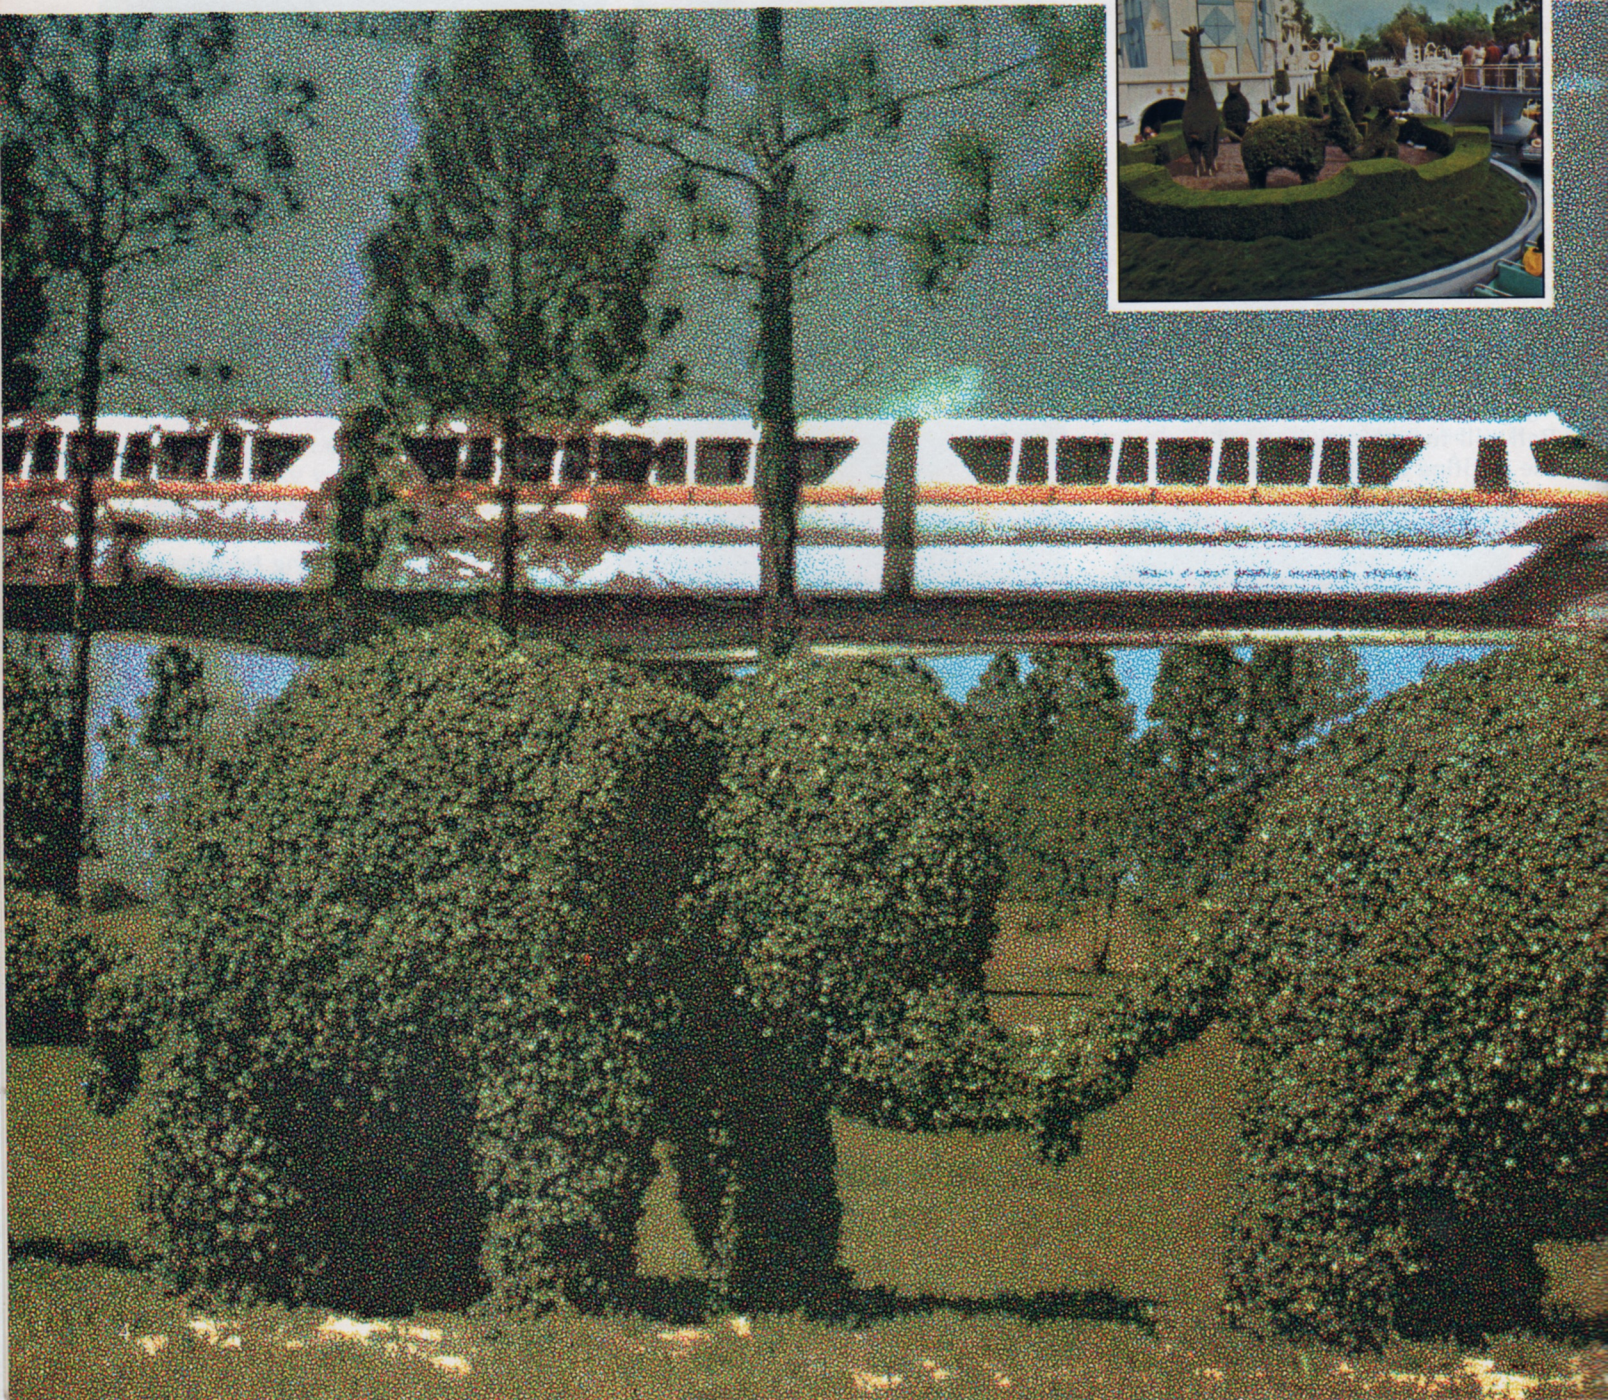

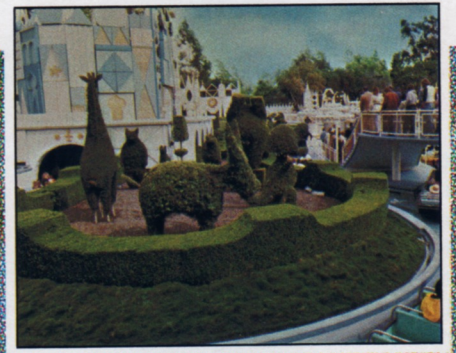

From "Alice in Wonderland" by Lewis Carroll

Chlorophyll Characters

A tree is a tree is a tree. Unless, of course, it's a stationary animal or bird or snake—an interesting turn of events that occurs frequently on the grounds of Disneyland and Walt Disney World Magic Kingdoms.

The phenomenon is called topiary. But rather than the stylized hedges or geometrical shaped plants usually associated with the gardening art, greenery at the two theme parks may resemble a leaping elephant, jumping frog, swan or even a sea serpent.

Although many notable examples of this extremely specialized form of gardening can still be seen in gardens of European nobility today, it is rarely found in the United States. Walt Disney had seen some of those gardens and resolved to create a fanciful menagerie of favorite Disney character animals, perhaps like those from "Fantasia," for the Disneyland landscaping.

Today comical chlorophyll characters greet visitors to both Disneyland Park and the Walt Disney World resort complex, while backstage, more hippos, giraffes and even water buffalos grow.

It takes from three to five and sometimes seven years of continuous care before a plant will assume a desired shape and be ready for exhibition and a permanent home. Landscape artists begin by weaving branches of a juniper, golden thuja, boxwood, or yew tree in and out of a basic wire form, accommodated by giant redwood boxes. As the tree grows, it is clipped, shaped and manicured every four to five days.

Unusual shapes lead to variations of the system, however. A verdant camel with four feet on the ground, for example, requires four individual trees, with the longest and most appropriately shaped one to become its head and neck. A hippo poised on one toe requires only one trunk, but the branches produced above that point must be full enough to take on the shape of the chubby herbivorous mammal.

The plants must receive tender, loving care during their "training" period. Over-watering or too much fertilizer can destroy many months of hard work.

Topiarly figures are so popular on the grounds of the Florida Vacation Kingdom and in the forecourt of "It's a Small World" at Disneyland, they're practically attractions in themselves. They're constantly being photographed by visitors to show the folks back home that even trees can display the Disney personality. 🐻

Summertime Fun In the

All-American College Marching Band

Royal St. Bachelors

Disneyland Park in California

The summer of '82 promises to be another one of excitement and top entertainment at Disneyland Park. Repeating last year's successful variety show, Space Mountain Stage will feature "Show Biz Is" — a delightful look at show biz, from vaudeville to movies to stage shows.

With the humorous and sometimes dubious help of Mickey, Minnie, Donald, Goofy and other Disney characters, a talented group of dancer/singers provides a colorful medley of tunes from many eras.

"Show Biz Is" is fun to see, and you can see it every day of the week this summer in Tomorrowland at Disneyland.

And of course you won't want to miss the popular Main Street Electrical Parade and the dazzling nightly "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks.

As in past seasons, Disneyland will feature top musical talents on stage nightly. Famous singers and groups will appear on Frontierland's Rivers of America stage.

At the far end of Main Street, the Carnation Plaza Gardens continues to offer fans one of the few remaining spots for dancing to the music of big bands. A different famous band is spotlighted weekly.

There'll be happy music around

Disney Theme Parks

Main Street Electrical Parade

every corner of the Park! Rock sounds will emanate from both the Space Stage and the popular Tomorrowland Terrace.

Other free entertainment includes the All-American College Marching Band, the Dapper Dans singing group, Disneyland Band, Royal Street Bachelors and Coke Corner pianist, among others.

The popular unlimited use ticket, "Passport to Disneyland" continues to be offered at the Park. The Magic Kingdom will be open from 9 a.m. to midnight Sundays through Fridays and 9 a.m. to 1 a.m. on Saturdays, beginning June 19 through the fun summer season.

Walt Disney World Vacation Kingdom in Florida

The Florida Magic Kingdom continues its year-long Tencennial celebration with a spectacular Tencennial Parade, a new Kids of the Kingdom musical revue and the Main Street Birthday Party.

Here, too, guests can enjoy the Main Street Electrical Parade and the sparkling "Fantasy in the Sky" fireworks, two favorite events, admired by young and old alike.

And of course, the 4th of July holiday will be a very special and exciting day at both Disney theme Parks. 🐻

LET'S GO TO THE MOVIES

"TEX" This summer will see the release of Walt Disney Productions' exciting teen adventure, "Tex." The film is based upon the best-selling novel by S.E. Hinton, a popular author of teen stories. Ms. Hinton's "The Outsiders," published in 1967, is considered a contemporary classic and sold over four million copies.

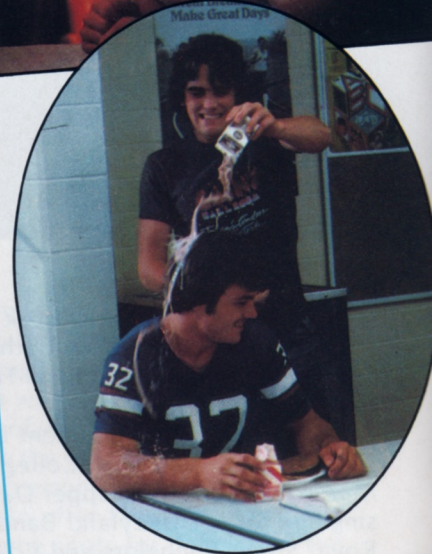

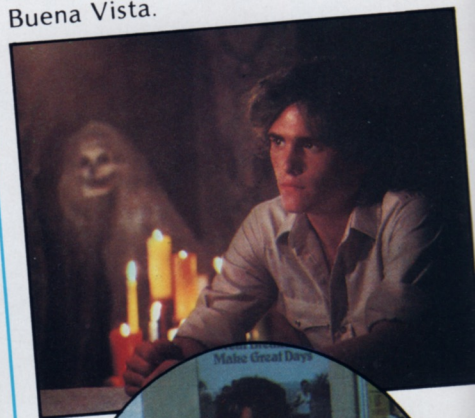

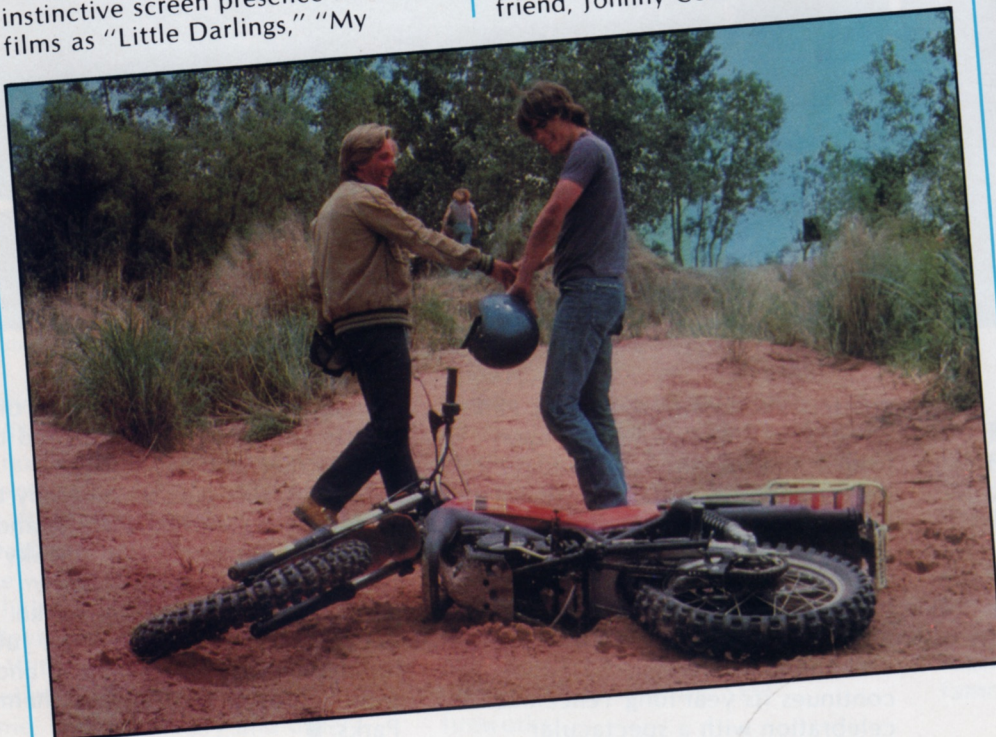

"Tex" stars Matt Dillon as Tex McCormick, a 15-year-old caught in an emotional struggle with his older brother Mason, played by Jim Metzler. At the age of 17, Matt Dillon has achieved a level of recognition and stardom most actors seldom reach in a lifetime. His instinctive screen presence in such films as "Little Darlings," "My Bodyguard" and "Over the Edge" have thrust him securely into the public spotlight. Now he tackles his most mature and challenging role in this coming-of-age adventure. Even though he has become an idol in teen magazines, Matt hopes to soften the image of teen sex star and establish himself as a serious dramatic actor.

The cast also includes Bill McKinney (seen in many Clint Eastwood films) as "Pop"; beautiful Meg Tilly as Tex's girl friend Jamie Collins; and Academy Award-winner Ben Johnson as Jamie's stern father. Emilio Estevez, son of actor Martin Sheen, also debuts as Tex's best friend, Johnny Collins.

Shooting locations around Bixby and Tulsa, Oklahoma, provided natural settings for the story as described in the Hinton novel. Many local residents were given "extra" roles in the production.

"Tex" was produced by Tim Zinnemann. Screenplay was by Charlie Haas and Tim Hunter (who also directed). In color by Technicolor, the film will be released by Buena Vista.

"TRON" Jeff Bridges, Bruce Boxleitner and David Warner star in Walt Disney Productions' summer release "TRON"...an exciting futuristic adventure set in a fantasy world never before presented on the motion picture screen. Computer graphics combined with special techniques in live-action photography result in amazing optical and lighting effects in this exciting new production.

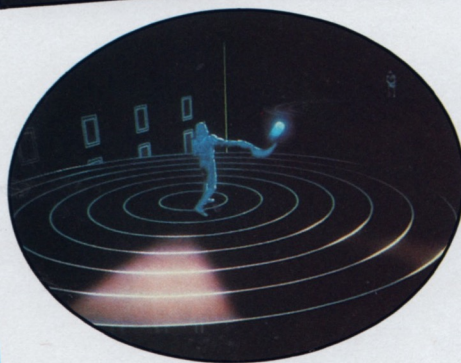

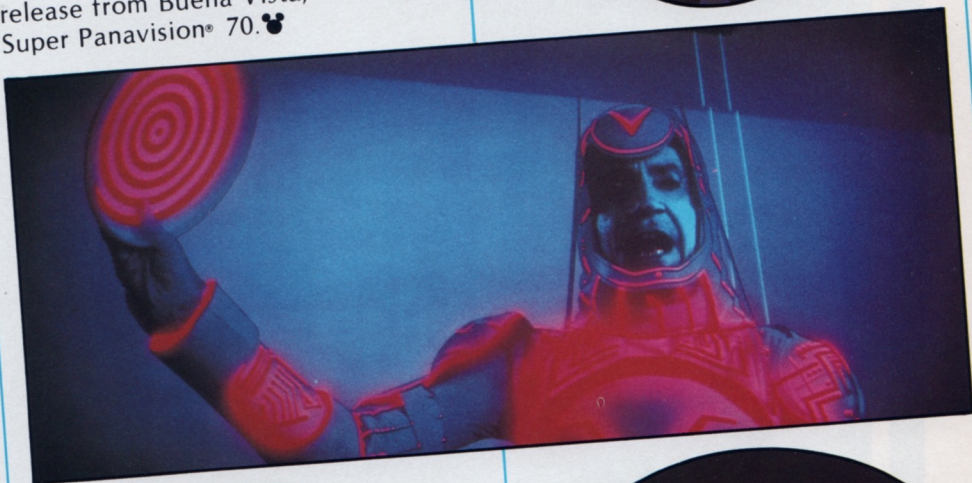

Steven Lisberger is making his feature directorial debut on the film, which he scripted and developed with producer Donald Kushner. Executive producer was Ron Miller. Harrison Ellenshaw was associate producer, with special effects being supervised by Ellenshaw and Richard Taylor.

"TRON" is the first major motion picture to make extensive use of computer graphics...creating a unique story about an electronic world whose electric-and-light beings plot to overthrow the program which controls their lives. It is especially timely in this age of the popular coin-operated video games. Yearly, more than $8 billion is spent worldwide on these electronic amusements. Computer graphics were first applied to aerospace and scientific research in the mid-1960's, when methods of simulating objects digitally in three dimensions proved just as effective as building models.

So extensive are the special effects on "TRON" that for the electronic world sequences the actors often worked against plain black backgrounds. One of the ways Bridges—and co-stars Bruce Boxleitner and Cindy Morgan—warmed to their roles was to play computer games on the set. According to Bridges, "These games, have a life of their own. When you play, you're actually competing against the people who programmed them. And that's what 'TRON' is about—our beings, our intelligence, are found in computer programs."

"TRON" is a Technicolor release from Buena Vista, filmed in Super Panavision® 70. 🍌

Epcot Center Racing Towards Completion

Construction and planning on Walt Disney World Epcot Center continue at a frantic pace to meet its scheduled opening date of Oct. 1. The gigantic Florida project, an $800-million showplace, features two distinct entertainment worlds—Future World and World Showcase. It will bring the 21st century to its visitors, allowing guests to explore the exciting technologies of tomorrow, plus the many pleasures of the cultures of foreign lands.

Epcot Center will be linked to the Magic Kingdom by a new eight-mile monorail system which will give summer guests a preview of the Center.

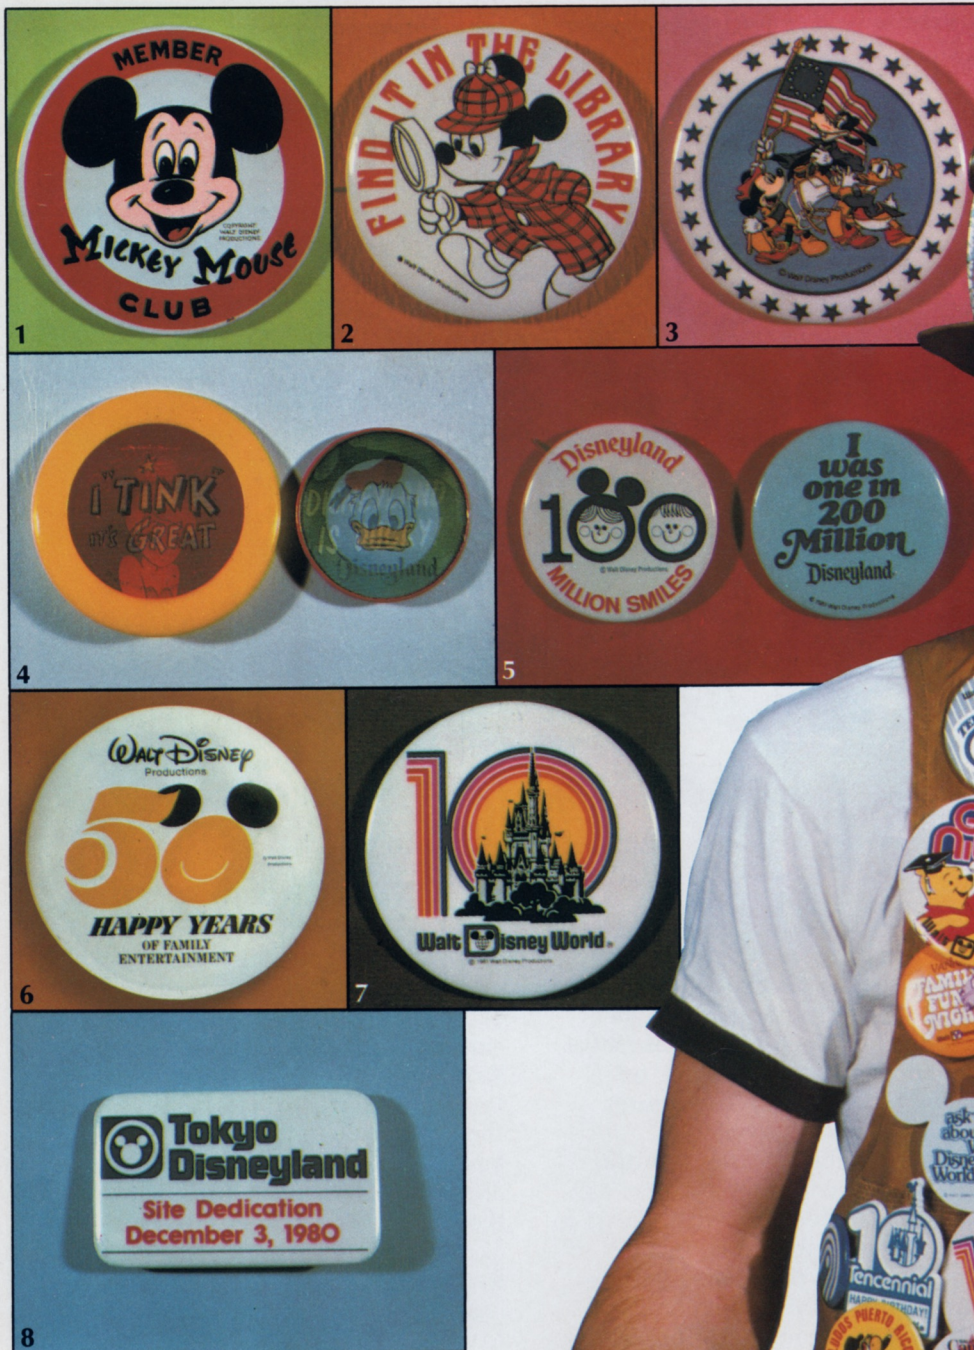

An eye-catching landmark, a 180-foot high geosphere called Spaceship Earth, serves as the entrance to Future World. Its interior adventure is presented by the Bell System. Other major U.S. corporations sponsoring stimulating concepts of the future include Kraft, Exxon, General Motors, Kodak, General Electric and Sperry Univac.

World Showcase will showcase the cultures of eight nations, with native architecture, music, dance, arts and crafts and the typical cuisine of each land. In authentic settings of an English pub, French sidewalk cafe, German beer garden, Aztec pyramid, Japanese shrine, Italian piazza, Mexican fiesta and the Canadian woods, visitors will have the feeling of having traveled around the world without having left the States. Excursion boats, much like those of northern Europe, will transport guests across a 40-acre lagoon to and from the international pavilions.

Within World Showcase, American Express and Coca Cola will present the American Adventure. Here, Benjamin Franklin and Mark Twain will head a cast of 36 famous Americans who come to life via Audio-Animatronics in great moments of our country's history.

All of the elements necessary to make this international showplace a memorable entertainment experience...the landscaping, buildings, shops, costumes, show installations...are coming together to make this, Walt Disney's greatest dream, become a dramatic reality. 🍌

by David R. Smith
Walt Disney Archives

In the field of collectibles, one of the most enduring subjects has been buttons. Celluloid pinback buttons as we know them today first made their appearance during the presidential election campaign of William McKinley in 1896. Buttons have continued in popularity for election campaigns down to the present, but they were also discovered by merchandisers who found them useful in advertising and promoting their products. The buttons additionally saw use as promotional items for athletic teams and their players, fairs, military units, and rock and roll, movie and television stars.

The first Disney button was made in 1927. It is extremely rare and features Oswald the Lucky Rabbit, Walt Disney's first major cartoon character. Mickey Mouse made his debut in 1928, and we find the first Mickey Mouse buttons in 1930. An early version of the Mickey Mouse Club, with meetings conducted in movie theaters throughout the country, fostered the production of several different styles. The popularity of Mickey Mouse merchandise during that decade led to buttons promoting everything from Mickey Mouse radios to Mickey Mouse undies. Even the American Dental Association got into the act, using Mickey and later Disney characters to promote dental hygiene.

Buttons have promoted the Disney feature films, from "Snow White" on, and with Disney's move to television in the 1950's, we find buttons for "Zorro," and probably the most well-known of all Disney buttons, the one designating the wearer as a Mickey Mouse Club member.

Disneyland and Walt Disney World have each contributed buttons over the years. Some have been sold at souvenir stands, others were given to guests lucky enough to be in the parks on a special occasion, while others were distributed only to the press or Disney employees. Buttons for special occasions are especially popular with collectors, who actively trade for those honoring the days Disneyland reached 100,000,000 and 200,000,000 visitors, Mickey Mouse's 50th birthday, the 25th anniversary of Disneyland and the 10th anniversary of Walt Disney World in Florida.

One reason for the popularity of buttons with collectors is that they are relatively inexpensive. Many were originally given out free, and even today can be found for prices under ten dollars. In the collections of the Disney Archives are more than a hundred Disney-themed buttons, ranging over a fifty-year period.

A Disney button collection is relatively easy to begin, and perhaps the button you pick up on your next visit to Disneyland or Walt Disney World will someday be valuable.

Walt Disney American Summer Cartoon Sale

SAVE 20% ON HOME VIDEO CARTOON COLLECTIONS

Walt Disney Home Video cartoon collections come specially packaged along with a free cartoon mug from participating authorized dealer

Ever since July, 1955, when Walt Disney first opened his Magic Kingdom of Disneyland, the American public has come to accept Disney family entertainment as part of an American summer tradition.

In keeping with this time-honored tradition (and extending it one step further), Walt Disney Home Video has come up with a new videocassette promotion designed to bring to life the spirit of a "Disney American Summer" in video stores across the nation.

Entitled "The Disney American Summer Cartoon Sale," the new promotion offers customers special savings on the purchase of any of Walt Disney Home Video's seven classic cartoon collections. Regularly $49.95, during this special limited-time offer, all Walt Disney cartoon titles will retail for only $39.95—a savings of 20%.

As an added bonus (while supplies last), all seven Disney cartoon videocassettes will be specially packaged along with a free, 16 oz., hot and cold mug featuring Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and Goofy.

"This is by far the biggest videocassette promotion ever offered," states Ben Tenn, Vice President of Walt Disney Home Video, "and we're launching it now to highlight the sales of our classic Walt Disney cartoons."

Each of the seven Walt Disney cartoon collections contains four to six original cartoons featuring the hilarious antics of Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck, and the entire Disney gang. Many have not been seen in movie theaters for over 25 years.

According to Tenn, "What we're offering now to the owners of videocassette players is something really unique. These classic cartoon titles contain some of the funniest animated gag sequences in the history of the cartoon medium. Owning them is almost like owning original art."

"In addition," Tenn adds, "parents can now pass on these legendary cartoon treasures to their children in much the same way they pass on classic books. It's like owning electronic literature."

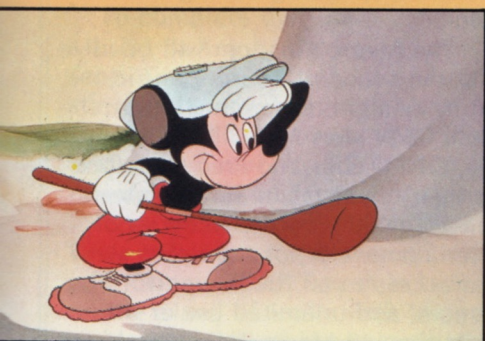

As for the free cartoon mug, "it's just our way of wishing a happy summer to all our video customers," Tenn explains, "and to remind them that thanks to Walt Disney Home Video, the magic of Disney animation now lives on..." 🐭
